Long -

Sword Swallowing seemed an obvious choice for an unemployed clown college graduate in Detroit, and with a name like Thom Sellectomy, clearly there was no other option: This regular Joe from next door was going to have to jam metal sticks down his throat.

With a dry sense of humor and a quick wit, he will share with you an inside look at traveling the world and doing shows for almost 20 years. Relating the misadventures of his travels, shows gone wrong and memorable hecklers; all while presenting sword swallowing in a way that even the most squeamish will enjoy.

Part stand-up comedy and part side show, Thom swallows swords, runs a drill up his nose and finishes the show with something you won't want to see, but won't be able to stop watching!

Short-

More standup comedy than sideshow, the emphasis is always on the comedy with a nod to the strange as Thom Sellectomy performs sword swallowing, human blockhead and other circus stunts.
